WAR NEWS.

Grant finds it about as difficult to flank Lee in his present position, as it is for a pedestrian to get around three women walking abreast on a St. Paul sidewalk.
So Grant, always careful of his brave men's lives when the proposed results can be as well accomplished by engineering, has taken to borrowing his way with puck and spirit through Lee's entrenched lines on the Chickahominy, perhaps not only with a view to avoid the earnage of a direct assault, but to gain time for the arrival of expected reinforcements from various quarters, so that when the final struggle comes, it may be more likely to prove decisive. We hold the theory that Lee's lines on the Chickahominy are the sole serious barrier to the capture of Richmond. For they are the sole barrier to Grant's throwing his army south of James river in the rear of Richmond, when its evacuation would be a necessary consequence of his position on its communications.

When, therefore, army correspondents say that "the siege of Richmond has begun," we conceive it to be no means the premature and hyperbolic statement which some of the military critics undoubtedly suppose, but a accurate statement of fact.

A Herald correspondent says that on the 8th inst., one division of the Chickahominy occupied a position across the Chickahominy between the Railroad Bridge and Sumner's Bridge. This is about ten miles due east of Richmond, and probably forms the advance of our extreme left. Our lines are said to be about seven miles in length—which would place our extreme right about Gaines' mill, and indicates that our army has swung considerably to the south-east, since the battle of Cold Harbor.

A rebel force, said to number about 3,000, under Morgan, have been playing "Hob" in Eastern Kentucky. They were pretending to be from the South-Western army, and so out across the "Hob" Handle, through Pound Gap, into Eastern Kentucky, robbing Union citizens of their horses and money, and other valables, and leaving their rebel brethren alone. Their most serious depredations have been committed along the line of the Covington and Lexington railroad, from Falmouth, within 30 miles of Cincinnati, down to Lexington. Between these places they have destroyed much of the railroad track, burned the depots, and done all the damage they could.
Gen. Burbridge, however, has got after them, overtaken some of them, thrashed them handsomely, and is now following them. It is a relief to know that there is local force on hand to meet the exigency.

—Hunter's victory over the rebels under Jones in the upper Shenandoah valley seems to be even more decisive than reported by the Richmond papers. Reports from other rebel sources say that the rebels were routed, and that the depots of the Government have no direct access from Hunter, and would indicate that Mosby's guerrillas had cut off his communications with Washington; though as he is living on the enemy's country, he probably doesn't care very much for that.

—Nothing from Sherman since Sunday, when he was within five miles of Marietta.
We hear, however, that the 17th Army Corps, recently evacuated from the Red River, has reached him, and replaced his force in front, which must be considerably weakened, less by casualties than by the necessity of guarding his gradually lengthening line of communication.

THE BALTIMORE CONVENTION.
The stutering telegraph has at last managed to stammer out enough of its story about the Baltimore Convention, to enable us to understand the general drift of its proceedings. Tuesday was devoted to organizing, and the result shows that delegates from Louisiana, Arkansas, Tennessee—ex-rebel States, reorganized "in spite" under the President's Amnesty Proclamation, were admitted into the convention.

Ex-Gov. Dennison of Ohio, was the President of the convention, and on Wednesday, after the Platform, which was published yesterday, was adopted, the convention proceeded to indicate its choice for President.

Of the two ways in which the almost complete unanimity of the convention might have found expression, the convention chose that one which would give the opposition to Mr. Lincoln the fairest and freest and fullest opportunity for development.

The result was that, upon the first ballot, Mr. Lincoln received the solid vote of every State represented in the Convention except Missouri, which was divided, the result being Lincoln 497; Grant 22. On motion of a Missouri delegate, the vote was then made unanimous, and "the enthusiasm was immense," as well it might be over such a spontaneous and overwhelming expression of the popular choice—more spontaneously overwhelming than has ever greeted the nomination of any President since Washington.

The nomination of Mr. Lincoln might and would have been completely unanimous on the first ballot if the Convention

HEADQUARTERS, ARMY OF THE POTOMAC, June 7, 5 P. M.

All quiet. No attack was made last night.

Maj. Danforth, Inspector on General Butler's staff, arrived here yesterday.

He came up the Chickahominy a distance of 35 miles and landed with an escort of 10 men. In coming across the country he occasionally saw rebel pickets who fled at his approach.

The main army was regularly received in the army.

New York, June 10.

The Herald correspondent on the 8th, says, the 2nd division 5th corps occupy a position from the railroad bridge over the Chickahominy to Sumner's bridge crossing the river two miles above.

The enemy are strongly posted on the opposite side with heavy guns which opened fire upon our columns when they moved. They were promptly responded to and quieted.

Another correspondent says our lines have been somewhat advanced and placed in a strong position for the defense. The enemy are within talking distance.

Our ranks are being filled rapidly by reinforcements.

HEADQUARTERS 9th Army Corps—June 7, 1864.

Yesterday we were shelled vigorously for half an hour. Only 8 men were killed or wounded.

About 4 P. M. the rebels made another desperate charge on the corps' works and were again disastrously repulsed.

Howe's division of Sheridan's cavalry has been ordered to the front. If successful it will be one of the most magnificent and hazardous expeditions of the war.

New York, June 10.

The Times has an account of General Averill's operations. His expedition was sent out to distract the attention of Morgan and other rebel commanders from the expedition under Gen. Crook.

In this, Averill appears to have been highly successful. He kept Morgan, with 5,000 men, near Williamsburg until Crook had completed his work, and then moved to join Crook.

On the 8th, he was encountered by Morgan, and though outnumbered 2 to 1, he fought bravely for hours. The gallant little command withstood assault after assault, holding their ground firm as a rock until dark.

Averill then moved off, Morgan not deeming it advisable to follow, and eventually fell in with Crook, leaving several skirmishes and meeting a force of 1,500 under Jenkins, which was utterly routed.

FROM KENTUCKY.

The Rebel Invasion—Mayville and Other Towns Captured—Burbridge Defeats them at Mount Sterling—Lexington Entered.

LEXINGTON, June 10.

The Ordnance train from Frankfort yesterday was attacked near Bagdad by Jenkins men. Mr. Sparks, Union member of the Ky. Legislature, was killed in the encounter. R. R. men think that the train returned to Frankfort as its engine was disabled by the rebels.

The attack and the capture proceeded to Williamsburg.

A force of Morgan's men captured at Mayville, reports that the force in Kentucky is under the immediate command of Morgan, Col. Alston and Col. Smith.

The total force is about three thousand. A large portion of them dismounted cavalry. They entered the State at Pound Gap. A scouting party under Everett, was sent ahead to pick up horses for dismounted men.

They passed through Hazel Green, Owensboro and Flemington, robbing citizens of money and other valuables. The farms of Union men were stripped of their produce, and the rebels citizens were protected.

Everett left Mayville Wednesday for Mount Sterling, at which place he arrived on the 9th. He was accompanied by the intention of attacking Lexington. The position of affairs in the central part of the State is now very serious.

The Kentucky Central Railroad is being repaired and trains will run to Cincinnati to-morrow.

Helen Holton left Covington to-day to open communication with Lexington.

Gen. Burbridge, who has been following the rebels since they left Pound Gap, came up with them yesterday at Mount Sterling, and whipped them handsomely.

A portion of Morgan's command entered Lexington at 2 o'clock this A. M., burned the city, and then moved on to the depot, and robbed a number of stores, and left at 10 o'clock, in the direction of Georgetown and Frankfort. Burbridge is following them.

Fire in Boston.

Early this morning a fire broke out in the building Nos. 16 and 17 Rows wharf, occupied by Messrs. Lewis commission merchant. The building was nearly destroyed with a large assortment of cotton, flour and West India goods. Loss estimated at $50,000 mostly insured.

Sherman's Movements from the 21st to the 31st—Dallas Captured.

NEW YORK, June 10.

The Tribune correspondent has details of Sherman's movements.

The 21st and 22d were devoted to rest at Dallas.

On the 23d, an order to march the next morning, on the direct route to Atlanta, was issued at the Etowah. The enemy's pickets and sharpshooters were met with, but the army crossed the river and passed on towards Huntsville, skirmishing on the way.

Towards evening heavy firing was heard in front of Hooker's position. Troops were hurried up but resulted in the scene after dark, when firing had ceased. They found that Hooker had suddenly fallen upon the rebels in a swamp, and driven them back.

The next morning a skirmish took place and the rebels were again forced back rapidly, but resulted in the capture of batteries with destructive effect on our men. They were cut down by the score. Our loss was between two and three hundred.

Fourteen Men Shot for Desertion.

A correspondent of the Atlanta Constitution gives the account of a military execution which recently occurred at Dalton: "I have witnessed a scene, the horror of which can never be forgotten. It was the execution of fourteen men by the sentence of a Court-martial. When I arrived upon the ground, I found the division of Major General Stevens drawn up in line, forming three sides of a hollow square. In front were sixteen stakes, with a coffin at the foot of each, and in the rear of these a long line of yawning graves. In a few moments afterward, the arrival of four wagons containing the unfortunate men, slowly filed through the line, and approached the fatal spot. The men, with one exception, appeared unshaken, and calmly looked around as though they were unconscious of the fearful end which they were approaching. By direction of General Reynolds they were drawn up in line, and a number of chaplains approached them and besought them to give the few remaining moments of their lives to prayer, which was followed by the reading of the twenty-third Psalm, and an eloquent prayer, which affected the prisoners very much. Gen. Reynolds then asked them if they had anything to say, and addressed them in an impressive manner for a few minutes. Two of them said they had nothing to say, and were ready to die. One said he was cut off from his command at Mission Ridge, and did not know where to go, and went home; the other said he had deserted on account of his family. Several of their regimental and company officers now came forward and bade them farewell. The men, with one exception, were very excited, several having lost all control of their feelings. General Reynolds turned to them and said: 'May God have mercy on your souls,' and, turning hastily away, the guard stepped forward, and taking each one to a stake, tied them fast, and then bound a cloth over their eyes. All began to pray, and some were shouting and clapping their hands. As the men were being executed, several of them were seen to be in great agony, and some were seen to be in great pain. The execution was completed at 10 o'clock, and the bodies were then buried in the graves. The scene was a most terrible one, and one which will never be forgotten by those who witnessed it."
